PRESS RELEASE

For its new exhibition presented in December 2023, the Galerie du Lendemain continues to explore the richness and diversity of the theme of the male body and its artistic representation.

After two group exhibitions, “Le nu masculin”, then “Subjective beauté - le choix du corps masculin”, the Galerie du Lendemain presents the photographs of Stéphane Gizard.

This new series entitled “Brady Rider + friends” reveals the intimate daily life of a young man today and his friends.

The look at today’s youth does not seek plastic aesthetics or physical perfection, but on the contrary an immediate truth of the moment, this decisive moment when each of these young men will allow spontaneity to blossom to appear on the image, creating thus a true form of freedom and abandonment.

The sensitivity of Stéphane Gizard brings here a new necessary and demanded definition of gentleness, of masculine tenderness, far from these archaic societal norms which are still imposed on us today.

Alexis Maillard

*I met Brady Rider in Paris one afternoon in May 2023.
He was sitting on a bench. He held a book in his hands; his arms were muscular.
He looked up and gave me a smile. Me stammering...
“Hey! How’s it going ? What are you reading ?”
He replied (in a charming American accent) “It’s by Aldous Huxley”
Really ! Meetings are never due to chance.
We started a conversation full of small talk and then I asked him to pose for me.
We saw each other several times until July.
Brady was born twenty-four years ago in South Carolina.
He is a painter. He now lives in Los Angeles.*

Stéphane Gizard is a French photographer living and working in Paris.

His unique vision and his freedom of creation makes him one of the most brilliant assets of contemporary masculine photography. Parallel to his commissioned works, he collaborates with the collective “Boys! Boys! Boys!” whose copy rights are donated to the Elton John AIDS Foundation, or else on a personal level he participates at charity auctions.
